CATASTROPHIC BUSHFIRES RACE UP THE MOUNTAIN INTO A CLOSE-KNIT COMMUNITY FORCED TO FIGHT FOR THEIR LIVES...

In this thrilling recounting, neighbours and friends face death and loss amidst fires surging through mountainous bushland. They confront life and death choices and endure the perils of a fire out of control. Together they fight the raging inferno, desperately protecting their lives and the community they cherish.

Each character responds to the overwhelming threat differently, remaking themselves through the tragedy and devastation and realising how precious their lives really are.

Despite their fear and loss amongst the flames, love, hope and friendship nurture their survival on wildfire mountain.

ABOUT THE AUTHOR

Ken Strahan is a social researcher providing consultancy services to industry and government through Strahan Research. Dr Strahan has spoken to thousands of people impacted by wildfire and has unique insights into human behaviour during fire. He has published numerous papers on his theory of self-evacuation archetypes and has captured the essence of this in this book.

A CONVERSATION WITH THE AUTHOR

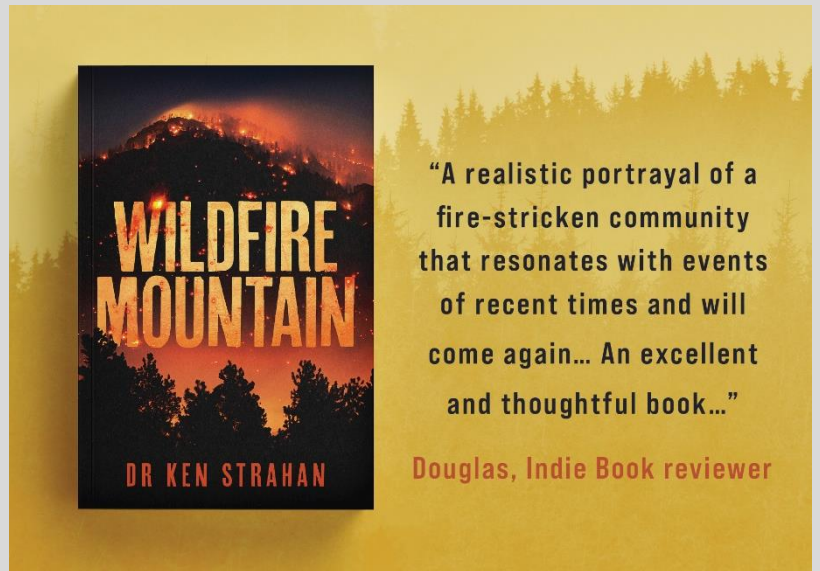

WHAT WAS YOUR JOURNEY TO WRITING WILDFIRE MOUNTAIN?

Bushfires have been a professional interest for many years. I am a leading expert in evacuation from bushfire. It was a natural jump to take my personal experience, research and my observations of the world around me and turn it into a book. I tend to do my writing immediately and complete any required research as I go. The most difficult part of the process for me was ordering all the ideas to allow for the direction of the story.

WHEN DID YOU REALISE YOU FIRST WANTED TO WRITE AND DO YOU HAVE MORE PLANS FOR THE FUTURE?

I knew I wanted to write when I was twelve years old and I wrote a story that was praised by my English teacher.

I have two more books I am expecting to finish very soon. It is easy to fall into the trap of letting self-doubt win and not wanting manuscripts to see the light of day but I hope to have these published in the future also.
