

Her Glorious Sunshine Awaits

Written by Tracey Friday

SYDNEY, 1925.

AT FIVE YEARS OF AGE, ALICE WAS ALREADY A MASTER PICKPOCKET AND THIEVING IN THE COURTHOUSE DURING HER OWN FATHER'S TRIAL.

Ten years later, seizing the opportunity to escape his grasp, dire consequences force Alice to flee the city and hide in the Blue Mountains.

Landing in the protection of elderly sisters with mysterious criminal connections, Alice's passion for horses drives her further across the country to the lush greenery of Adelaide and then the arid outback of the wide-open Western Australia.

Driven by the desire for love, Alice's unique journey is not without dangers and, despite her strong morals, there comes a time under intense circumstances where past skills must be reawakened.

Born to a life of crime and misery – how far would you go to find your glorious sunshine?

A CONVERSATION WITH THE AUTHOR

WHAT DREW YOU TO WRITING HER GLORIOUS SUNSHINE AWAITS?

I wanted to incorporate an unimaginable conflict between a father and daughter and liked the idea of basing it in Sydney during the 1920s. I also knew that the father had to get his comeuppance but from the most unlikely source. I wanted to test the daughter's mettle where I found that she is gutsy, courageous and determined to follow her heart to become the best person she could be given her rough start in life.

WHERE DO YOU GET YOUR INFORMATION OR IDEAS FOR YOUR BOOKS?

I am extremely fortunate because while I have an appalling sense of direction, I am truly blessed with an imagination that unashamedly runs riot. Firstly, I choose a particular bygone era and my main character. Then I run a few scenarios in my head to see what will work and the conflicts that I can throw their way and fortunately, so far, I have been able to bring them to life. Sometimes an idea or spark comes from a snippet of an overheard conversation, and I think 'I'll use that and see what grows'. I love my characters, they become family, even the deliciously despicable ones who can be extremely fun to shake everything up a little.
