When a training flight ends in disaster, Santa must conquer the iconic Murray River in order to save Christmas.

This is a story to make you smile and perfect for anyone who loves holidays by the river.

"Readers will have a thrilling time discovering Australia's Murray River, as Santa explores a boat load of iconic locations. For river bound Aussie's there are waves of nostalgia and budding childhood memories to indulge in. For new visitors, a packed itinerary of ripper new places awaits!"

Emma – Indie Book Reviewer

ABOUT THE AUTHOR

Dave O'Neill has been writing rhymes since he was fifteen and managed to turn his passion into a career in journalism, media and communications.

After more than ten years living in Melbourne working in the footy industry, Dave has returned to his roots in Ballarat.

With two gorgeous kids under three, Dave is now chasing his dreams of writing books and hoping to inspire them to always shoot for the stars.

DOES WRITING ENERGISE OR EXHAUST YOU?

Writing is an outlet for me. My brain seems to need creative time to keep things exciting. I often find myself writing in my head when I should be asleep. It usually makes me think I've struck gold, only to write the words down the next morning and realise they weren't as good as I thought they would be.

WHAT ADVICE DO YOU HAVE FOR WRITERS?

While you have to have some ego and belief in your ability to really give it a crack, you must be able to accept feedback and understand you will never know it all.

Always check whether your ideas make sense, utilising both Google and experts in the field you can usually get the right answer.
