ABOUT THE AUTHOR

Connie spent more than thirty years in the advertising industry, working on some of the world's biggest brands and at some of the most creative agencies.

Connie has also had his work exhibited by the British Council. He is now focusing on his personal passions: art and writing. 'The thing I've taken from advertising is to be creatively disruptive and artistically opportunistic,' Connie says. Connie loves to explore his creative ambition with innovation and fresh perspectives and is also very passionate about education and the power of learning.

On a personal note, he loves food, cooking, gardening and jazz.

A CONVERSATION WITH THE AUTHOR

WHEN DID YOU FIRST REALISE YOU WANTED TO WRITE?

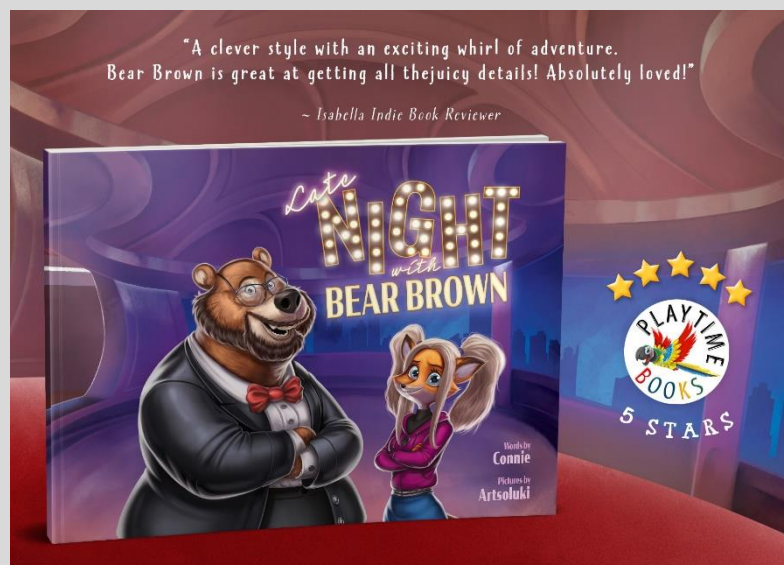

I've always liked expressing myself through writing, but it was only when I was recognised professionally that I realised the opportunity.

WHAT DREW YOU TO THE SUBJECT MATTER OF BEAR BROWN?

Contemporary culture was a major inspiration. And the opportunity to frame the current adult world for a younger audience. Popular culture, trends and media are the main influences for concepts.

WHAT HAVE YOU ENJOYED ABOUT WRITING A CHILDREN'S BOOK?

I'm enjoying writing for the age of raw creativity, freedom of imagination and spirit. It's also been an amazing opportunity to bring a creative twist to old children's book characters where the stories had no positive end, such as Humpty Dumpty.
