

The Exploration of the Antarctic Peninsula

Written by Hugh Allan

A CHRONOLOGICAL ACCOUNT OF EXPEDITIONS BY THE EXPLORERS WHO WORKED THE ANTARCTIC
PENINSULA DURING THE HISTORICAL PERIOD 1819
TO 1937...

Following the adventures of 30 different expeditions, from nine countries plus Australia, The Exploration of the Antarctic Peninsula dives into the complex geography of great channels and unknown islands that have formed the incredible Peninsula since time began.

A landscape unlike any other, filled by wildlife and ecosystems so vastly different from any you've learned of before.

This deep dive into the Antarctic through the discoveries detailed in this collected work by the exceptionally thorough and talented Australian author, Hugh Allan, is one for the future generations to discover.

ABOUT THE AUTHOR

Hugh has had a life-long passion for Antarctica and its explorers. He has a personal library of 56 titles on the subject. He gained his science degree as a part-time student in the 1980s, and has had three works of fiction published (by Shawline). In 2003 he and his wife Wendy went on a cruise to the Antarctic Peninsula. Hugh did a second cruise to that region in 2009. Hugh and Wendy live in Sydney, as do their two daughters, a son-in-law and one grandson.
