A Conversation with Jamie

If you had to do something differently as a child or teenager to become a better writer as an adult, what would you do?

I would have believed in myself more and not let my insecurities win.

When did you first realize you wanted to be a writer?

When I was in primary school one of the things that we would do during english class was write short stories and I found this quite fun. I continued to write in my free time but never actively pursued writing as a career until 2020.

What are your plans for your future book/s?

I plan to write a least a couple of more books that will follow on from 'Twin Alphas Abused Mate Part 1: Omega'. If it works out, I might even write more for the series.

I also have a couple of other children's books planned out.

Why did you write 'Twin Alphas Abused Mate Part 1: Omega'? What were your inspirations?

I have read so many books about a weaker female being rescued by a strong male. The two go through a lot of things before living happily ever after.

I haven't read many books where it's a weaker male being rescued by a stronger partner, whether that partner is male or female. I also haven't read a lot of books with LGBTQ+ characters as the main focus.

For these reasons, I decided to write something that was a little different to what is already out there.

What drew you to the subject matter of the book and also these characters within?

I have always loved reading books in the fantasy genre, especially ones about werewolves, vampires, and dragons. I chose this genre as it was something that I was already familiar with and loved to read.

What was the biggest challenge when writing the book?

My biggest challenges in writing this book would be my tendency to procrastinate and also writer's block. Both these things made it a little hard at times to finish writing this book.

Do you have any suggestions to help others become a better writer? If so, what are they?

Remember that inspiration for a story can come from anywhere and anything.

How many hours a day do you write?

I try to write for at least an hour every day, but sometimes I will write for longer.

Where do you get your information or ideas for your books?

I get my ideas from a lot of different places, such as the things I see and hear around me.
