SLAVE CITY BETHANY R. MINSTER

ONE BY ONE, THE SOLDIERS VANISH...

Farrah, a young slave for an imperious family, is recently sold to an equally cruel and tyrannical overlord.

In transition to her new home of Buson, aka 'slave city', an unexpected event causes them to become stranded in an old ghost town...

One by one the soldiers that were taking her to Buson vanish...

An assassination attempt upon her life leaves her with more questions than answers...

A bounty placed on her head gives her the knowing that her past holds many answers she must uncover to survive...

Farrah finds a way to unite fellow slaves to devise a plan for an uprising that has been a long time coming...

Nothing, at tomorrow's sunrise, will ever be the same for anyone...

AUTHOR BIO

Bethany Minster is a young woman who has always been very ambitious in her goals and the words 'Give-up' have never been in her dictionary nor have they ever made sense. She has been rejected so many times over the years in search of where she belonged career wise in many different ways and never ever given up.

Bethany has been diagnosed with extreme Depression and Anxiety Disorder, but she never lets her Disorders get in the way of her happiness. She believes that she will achieve all her dreams and goals and doesn't care how long it takes. She doesn't want to have any regrets when her time comes. Bethany always puts 110% of her energy into everything she does and doesn't accept anything less.

A CONVERSATION WITH THE AUTHOR

WHY DID YOU WRITE 'TOMORROW'S SUNRISE: SLAVE CITY'? WHAT WERE YOUR INSPIRATIONS?

My inspirations for this book were growing up with the imagination and magic of film and media and the ideas that the greatest bestsellers of the world had brought to use. Such as J.K Rowling and George R.R Martin not to mention Shakespeare, he was the one who first brought magic into our lives. Creating worlds and stories filled with romance and drama, and the ability to put such emotion into his characters and their lives and bring them to life. The idea that magics truly does exist, not in the outside world, but in every human mind gives me hope and happiness with the thought that maybe I'm not so alone. I have always dreamed of far-off places and adventures like a child, and I have never been able to stop. I not only have enough imagination for my story telling but it overflows and gushes into the world of artistry and drawing.

My inspiration for this particular book is the idea of the post-apocalyptic world and what life would be like for our descents if God allows anyone to be spared, I love knowledge of any kind and am always curious about the mysteries our world still hides from us. I used the fact that there are continents underneath the earth's crust and blended it nicely into my story to give it more flare and umph. So, you see my inspirations are many and my thoughts, they runneth over and blend into beautiful creations.

HOW DO YOU CREATE OR MODEL YOUR CHARACTERS TO FIT THE REQUIREMENTS OF THE STORY AND THE EXPECTATIONS OF THE READERS?

I create them firstly by their personalities then their relationships with the other characters. I don't start thinking about what they look like until I have to write a description about them. And then I build the world around them and what their occupation is, how they feel about it, etc.

WHAT ARE YOUR PLANS FOR YOUR FUTURE BOOKS?

Because my mind continuously thinks, I have many ideas for books and series. But I don't have any actual plan plans for what to do with them other than have them published like this one. If they turn out bad, I don't mind I will still keep writing and take the bad comments as creative criticisms
