OPENING DOORS

YVONNE FOGARTY

A CONVERSATION WITH THE AUTHOR

WHY DID YOU WRITE 'OPENING DOORS'? WHAT WERE YOUR INSPIRATIONS?

My inspiration came from wanting to share my experiences and my spiritual growth as I began seeing deeper into consciousness. Life is there to support us if we are able to open our heart and mind to accept there is more to life. The first precognitive vision I had saved a friend from possibly losing her baby as she didn't know she was pregnant, and it was then that I realised instead of continuously rejecting my gifts I could use them to help others in a positive way. As my clairvoyancy developed I could see the mental issues relating to a person's physical illness and many stories in the book are about these experiences with clients. I realised writing this book has healed my life and I know some of the stories in this book have and can help many others.

WHAT WAS AN EARLY EXPERIENCE WHERE YOU LEARNED LANGUAGE HAD POWER?

When I first spoke at a luncheon with well over 400 women in the main ballroom of a five-star hotel. I was asked to share my journey helping at ANZA to encourage others to get involved with helping the less fortunate in Jakarta. I shared how I used to be nervous, insecure and very hesitant to help and I started out contributing behind the scenes in very small ways. As I spoke that morning I actually felt my heart open up as the words flowed out. I sensed they held a power and I felt that power reach out as the vibration from those words touched many of the women in the room. Through the raw and exposing honesty about my own inner afflictions, we had many women sign up to assist.
