

PANDEMIC Love

DANI MATTHEWSON

NEW LOVE BEFORE THE GLOBAL PANDEMIC LOOKED AND FELT VERY DIFFERENT...

Dana, a 27-year-old scientist, has taken a new job working within the COVID-19 branch of the hospital. Her goal: to work with and learn how to identify the virus.

She works closely with the medical teams to uncover the data they need to treat the radical virus onslaught, but in the process her own life becomes threatened and she must experience the virus firsthand...

Her contagion brings her a chance introduction to an unexpected love interest during the hospital shutdown.

This unintentional attraction between English doctor, Michael, and Dana, leads them to being exposed to the virus and ultimately places them both in a strict quarantine. Tension for Dana and Mike grows as they endure days in isolation together.

The virus has delivered many terrible things but this inconvenience for the smitten Dana and Mike may bring them more happiness than they had known before...

ABOUT THE AUTHOR

Danielle grew up and resides within the beautiful and ever-growing region of Lake Macquarie, Australia. She dabbled in many creative pursuits during her childhood, but ultimately became a Registered Nurse, with the inclination of helping others. She has worked for over twelve years in a very busy emergency department, and most recently has been vaccinating the community against a common threat, COVID-19. Whilst on leave, COVID-19 had her workplace implement many changes to protocols. Her intrigue for writing came at this time, and with a few real-life influences, she created Pandemic Love.

A CONVERSATION WITH THE AUTHOR

WHY DID YOU WRITE 'PANDEMIC LOVE'? WHAT WERE YOUR INSPIRATIONS?

Having worked in the hospital system for many years I knew plenty of the ins and outs of how things worked, and the types of people who worked there. It wasn't until COVID-19 came along and the hospital system went into crises mode that I had the idea for this book, somewhat based on the true events unfolding.

I wanted to explore the concept of a doctor-patient-love relationship, where they were thrown into quarantine and where they had to refrain from any form of intimacy. With that, the story unravelled itself to me and inspirations throughout the rest of the book were a combination of real-life instances and completely created ones.

WHAT WAS THE BIGGEST CHALLENGE WHEN WRITING THE BOOK?

Having the story meet its end in a non-cliché way. I was envisioning it all coming together smoothly and succinctly, with a potential 'fairy-tale' like ending, but as writing progressed I knew there was more in-depth information and conversation amongst the characters that needed to happen first. Plus... how boring are cliché endings?
